

EQUALITY ANALYSIS PROCEDURE: The University's approach to 'due regard'

Introduction

Equality Analysis is widely regarded as a very good method to demonstrate 'due regard' to the general duty aims to eliminate discrimination, advance equality of opportunity and foster good relations. "Equality Analysis" is the term recommended by the Equality and Human Rights Commission and the Equality Challenge Unit amongst others in this approach to consider 'due regard' when developing and implementing changes to strategy, policy and practice.

The University's Equality Analysis form is set out in Annex A of this document.

The purpose of Equality Analysis?

The purpose of EA is twofold, i) to identify unintended consequences and mitigate them as far as is possible and ii) actively consider how change to policy might support the advancement of equality and foster good relations.

Completing the Equality Analysis Form

In order to support and evidence our legal responsibility to demonstrate 'due regard', the University will continue to encourage an equality analysis (EA) of all policies using the EA form set out in Annex A. The EA form is a checklist that makes an evaluation of whether or not a particular policy or guidance document demonstrates 'due regard' to the general duty aims to eliminate discrimination, advance equality of opportunity and foster good relations in relation to people with one or more of the 'protected characteristics'<sup>1</sup>. Marriage and Civil Partnership is covered for the first aim of the duty (i.e. requirement to eliminate unlawful discrimination) and only with respect to employment and not education.

Conducting a 'full' equality analysis is not required; however if any actual or likely unintended consequences are noted, steps or measures to mitigate adverse impact as far as is possible and proportionate must be considered and put in place.

The EA should be completed by the policy author who should ensure that the following statement is included at the end of each policy:

Birmingham City University's commitment to equality means that this policy has been screened in relation to paying due regard to the general duty in relation to the relevant protected characteristics, the use of comprehensible, inclusive language, and the avoidance of stereotypes. This document is available in alternative formats on request.

The EA form once completed with the inclusion of the above statement should be returned to the Equality and Diversity Policy Advisor, who will consider the form alongside the associated policy or guidance and counter-sign.

Once counter-signed or approved a copy of the EA will be returned to the policy author.

If the policy subsequently changes, (e.g., as result of discussion at Senate) then the equality analysis will need to be redone.

A basic record of EAs conducted will be kept and may be reported to the Board of Governors and relevant Committees from time to time.
